In 1994 Jonas Bohlin and Thomas Sandell were tasked with designing a series of practical and quality furniture for the company Forminord, located near the Arctic Circle.

They blended traditional Swedish design elements with a global perspective to create the Snow series, which is deliberately straightforward and features practical cutout handles as the only decorative element.

Since its introduction in 1994, the Snow range has become a beloved Swedish classic due to its distinctive expression, excellent quality, and multi-functional nature.

Production of the Snow series remains manual and occurs in Tibro, a furniture-making town in southern Sweden.
