DESCRIPTION

Spectators fabric by Lucienne Day for Classic Textiles.

After graduating from the Printed Textiles department of the Royal College of Art in 1940, Lucienne Day's design career faced limitations due to the effects of the Second World War. As the restrictions of the war began to ease, she started to create modern furnishing textile designs that moved away from the bleakness of the war years.

This design, which features spectacle-wearing figures as "spectators", is visually and verbally clever. It was awarded a Gran Premio at the Milan Triennale in 1954 and is considered one of Lucienne's favourite designs, as it perfectly captures her playful and lively style when designing patterns.

Lucienne Day printed textiles from the 1950s have been reissued and digitally printed in 12 different designs and many more colourways.
