DESCRIPTION

Bodleian Libraries Chair by Barber Osgerby for Isokon Plus.

The relationship between Isokon Plus and the design duo Barber Osgerby is a long and successful one. The Bodleian Libraries chair, designed in 2014, was the winning entry to the highly coveted Bodleian Libraries Chair Competition, and only the third new chair developed specifically for Oxford's Bodleian Library since 1756.

The chair draws inspiration from Vitra's Tip Ton chair, namely the sled base with a gentle upward curve towards the front, as well as the environment for which it is designed. The rear of the chair, a strong vertical timber, echoes the spines of books in the library itself whilst providing the necessary comfort for periods of intense study and research.

"Readers virtually live in the Bodleian," notes Jay Osgerby: "The brief said that it had to be comfortable for up to 12 hours of continuous use, which is a big challenge for any kind of seating, even a car seat because it's rare a journey would be that long. We worked a lot, through trial and error, to make sure the ergonomics were completely perfect... Having the tiniest amount of forward tilt is great because it allows the blood to flow more easily around your body; it's great for your posture and lower back."

The chair's circular construction provides remarkable strength and lightness, with comfortable armrests that continue from the seat-back to increase its ergonomic aspect.
