The Lightwood Desk 120 exudes the cosy ambience and tactile allure of natural wood. Its legs take on the graceful form of an inverted V, featuring a broader profile on the seating side and a slightly more delicate contour on the opposing end. This meticulous design ensures an exquisite aesthetic from all angles. The solid wood desk is available in variants with or without panels and drawers.

Originally conceived for a hotel project in Japan, this solid wood desk underwent subtle enhancements. A drawer was artfully incorporated, accompanied by minor tweaks to the panel arrangement.

The desk is crafted using wood sourced from ash or oak trees found in North America, which are carefully cultivated and harvested following a systematic approach.

The table top boasts a thickness of 25 mm and is crafted from solid wood. Employing knotted wood for its construction results in each item displaying a unique blend of colours, wood grain, and knot arrangements.

Veneer is used for bottom slab of drawer.

The table's coating and adhesive help minimize VOC emissions during both manufacturing and the final product. These substances underwent formaldehyde emission testing following the ISO12460 standard, ensuring that they do not surpass the emission threshold of 0.4 mg/l.
